

A colorful illustration of two pig brothers in a tree. One pig is sitting in a green tire swing hanging from a tree branch, wearing a red shirt and blue pants. The other pig is standing on the ground, looking up at the swing, wearing a purple jacket and brown pants. The tree has yellow and orange autumn leaves. The title 'what brothers do best' is written in blue text in the center of the image.

Brothers can help you

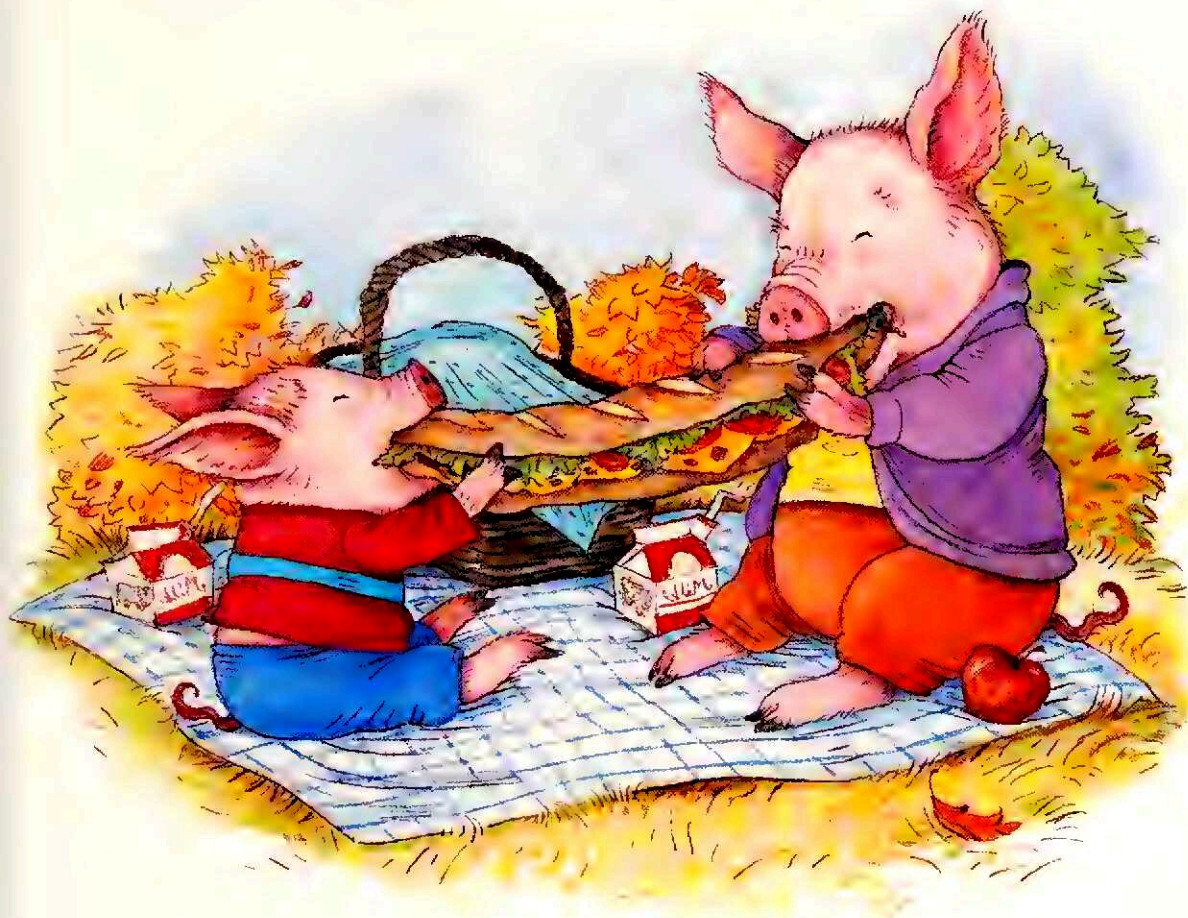

climb a tree,

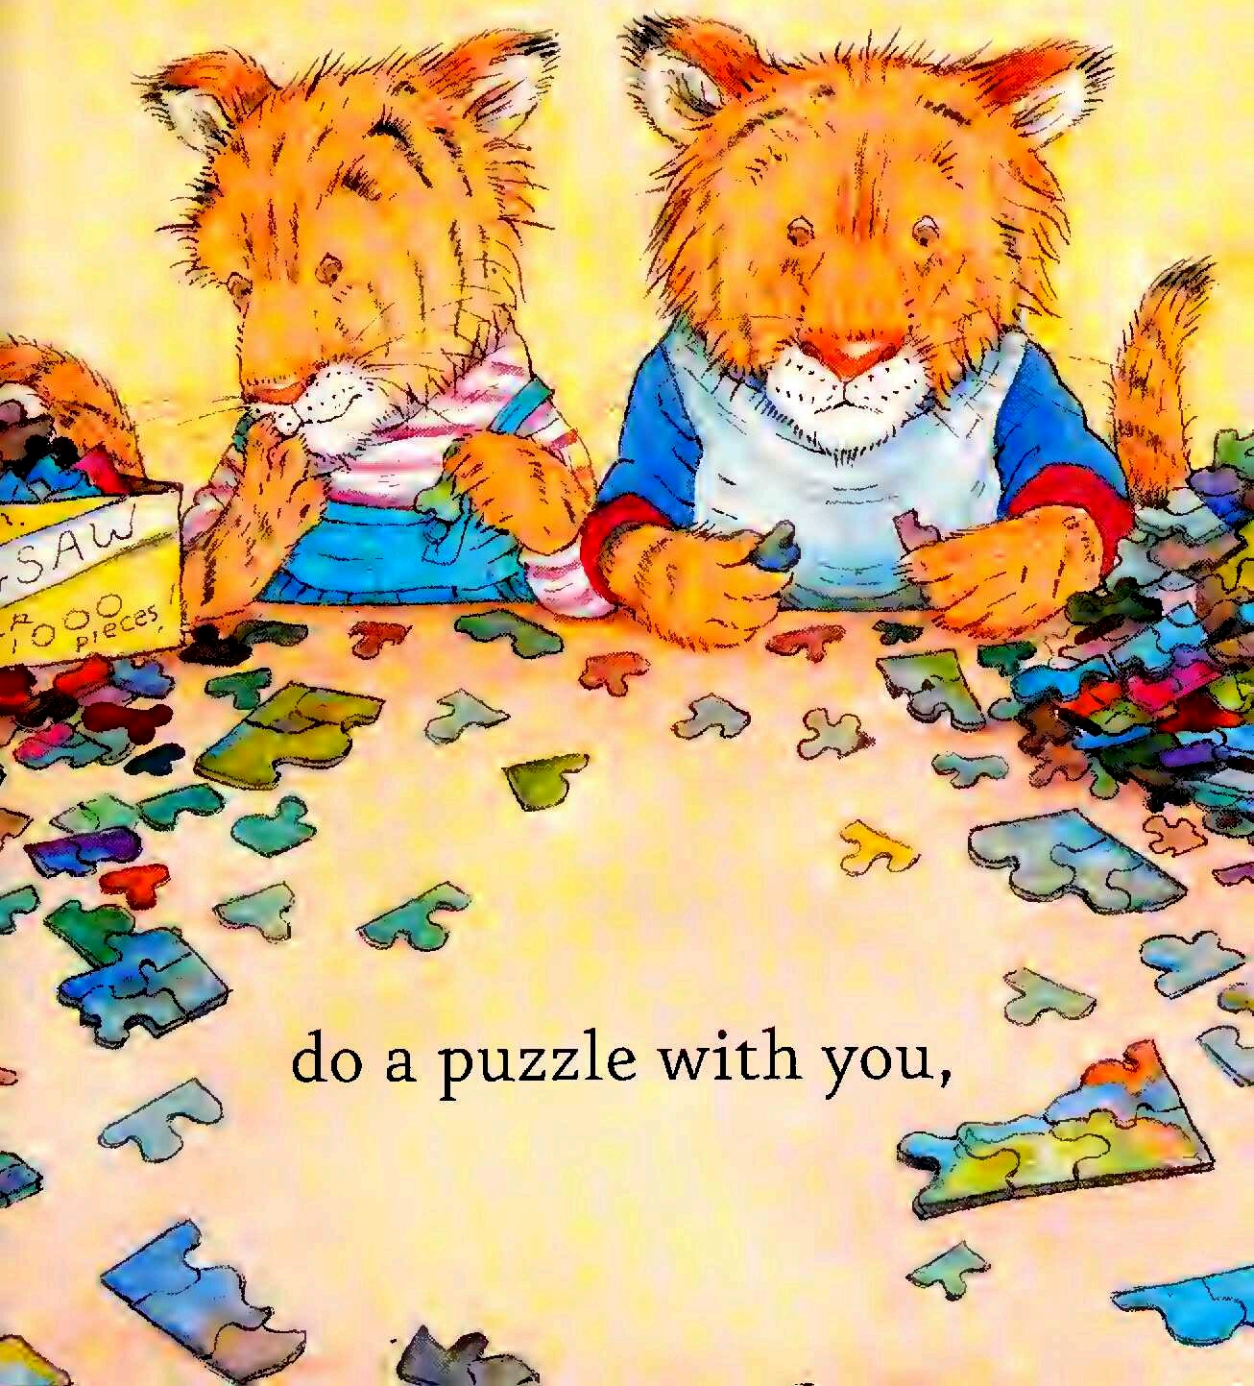

push you on a swing,

and share a delicious snack.

Brothers can teach you
how to swim,

do a puzzle with you,

and let you win at tic-tac-toe.

Brothers can teach you
their favorite sport,

start a game of tag,

and show you how to make a plane.

Brothers can make music with you,

play pretend,

and help you build with clay.

Brothers can help you
clean your room,

take you to the library, and be there when you need them.

But best of all,
brothers can give you lots and lots of love!

Brothers can do lots of things, like push you on a swing, make music with you, and take you to the library. But what do they do best? The answer is made perfectly clear in this irresistible celebration of siblings and the everyday things they do.

"The creative team behind What Mommies Do Best/ What Daddies Do Best scores again. . . . [A] great book to share with a child who is anticipating a new sibling or who needs to be reminded of the perks of being the older one." —School Library Journal
